1. INTRODUCTION

Human rights belong to all human beings regardless of their national or ethnic origin, gender, sex, skin colour, religion, age, disability, sexual orientation, gender identity, language, or any other status. Human rights are interlinked, interdependent and indivisible. They are universal and are guaranteed under laws, conventions, customary and international law, as well as under general principles and other sources of international law. The principle of universality of human rights is the cornerstone of international human rights law. This principle, which was for the first time enshrined in the 1948 Universal Declaration of Human Rights, is set forth under a number of international human rights conventions, declarations, and resolutions. The 1993 Vienna World Conference on Human Rights placed upon states the obligation to promote and protect all human rights, regardless of the states' political, economic, and cultural systems.

Non-discrimination is a comprehensive principle of international human rights law. This principle is set forth in all core human rights conventions and is the central topic of certain international human rights conventions, such as the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women. This concept applies to all and with respect to all human rights and freedoms, while prohibiting discrimination on grounds of an open-ended list of personal features such as gender, race, skin colour and other features.

National Equality and Non-Discrimination Strategy

In 2012, the Government of the Republic of Macedonia adopted the first National Equality and Non-Discrimination Strategy covering the 2012-2015 period. With a view to assessing the progress made, i.e. taking stock of the Strategy implementation and establishing whether the desired results were reached, in cooperation with the OSCE Mission in Skopje, in 2015, the Ministry of Labour and Social Policy made an Evaluation of the Strategy, which produced guidelines and provided the basis for the new National Strategy for the 2016-2020 period.

The 2016-2020 National Equality and Non-Discrimination Strategy is a strategic document of the Government of the Republic of Macedonia, which defines the goals, measures, indicators and key policy makers in designing the policy for promotion of rights and equal opportunities in various areas of social life, defining as well responsible implementing agencies and all stakeholders in attaining equality and non-discrimination in the Republic of Macedonia.

Different from the previous Strategy, this Strategy takes into account all grounds of discrimination in line with the Law on the Prevention of and Protection against Discrimination (Article 3) and conceptually it applies to discrimination in all areas, grouped as follows: employment and labour relations; education, science, sports and culture; social security (social protection, pension and disability insurance and health care); justice and administration; and access to goods and services, in following with recommendations given by UN human rights mechanisms relating to the Republic of Macedonia.

In addition, this document contributes that the country fulfil its internationally assumed obligations and underlines the readiness of the Republic of Macedonia to harmonize all considerations, activities and resources under a coherent framework and unified approach aimed at sustainable development, human rights promotion and ensuring equal opportunities. The purpose of this document is to provide for continual development in the implementation of these rights without discrimination on any grounds.

Specific short and mid-term tasks and activities for the advancement of the goals and of the implementation of measures will be defined under one-year operative programs, which will set the priorities, the manner of implementation, the timeframe, the implementing agencies, the envisaged budget, expected results, and qualitative and quantitative success indicators.

Timeframe

The National Equality and Non-Discrimination Strategy is a mid-term document. The strategic goals are envisaged to be achieved in the period from 2016 to 2020.

Budget

The budget for attainment of the strategic goals will be designed in accordance and in coordination with the on-going process of strategic and budget planning and by designing annual budget plans, as part of horizontal budgets of bodies in charge of the Strategy implementation, i.e. funds will be provided under the Budget of the Republic of Macedonia. The detailed fiscal implications of activities to be undertaken in the current year will be part of operative plans for implementation of the National Strategy, in following with the annual budget of the Government of the Republic of Macedonia.

EU pre-accession funds, as well as funds provided by units of local self-government and donations will be also of great significance in providing support to fulfilling the strategic goals and to implementing projected activities.

Drafting Methodology and Approach

The drafting of the National Equality and Non-Discrimination Strategy was part of a project, which the Ministry of Labour and Social Policy implemented with the support of the OSCE Mission in Skopje.

The text of the National Equality and Non-Discrimination Strategy was drafted by a Working Group, composed of representatives of in-line ministries at the Government of the Republic of Macedonia, as well as of representatives of the Commission for Protection against Discrimination, the Ombudsman's Office, the Agency for Realization of Rights of Communities, and representatives of civil society organizations, working in the area of discrimination prevention and protection.

The groundwork for this Strategy was laid by the previously prepared Evaluation of the first 2012-2015 National Equality and Non-Discrimination Strategy on grounds of age, gender, ethnic affiliation, and mental and physical disability. In the first stage of the preparation of the Evaluation, the OSCE Mission in Skopje and the Ministry of Labour and Social Policy recruited three experts. The Evaluation of the 2012-2015 National Equality and Non-Discrimination Strategy on grounds of mental and physical disability, ethnic affiliation, age, and gender underlines that the Strategy has had a greatly positive role in developing a policy for addressing the issue of discrimination in the Republic of Macedonia. In addition, the Evaluation recommends implementation of the non-discrimination and equal opportunity concepts by undertaking a coordinated set of measures and activities that would have a systemic effect, both at the central and at the local level. In this regard, there must be sustained public awareness raising and building of capacities of relevant actors and stakeholders. It is necessary to take into consideration accumulated knowledge and new trends with a view to advancing the legislation that would incorporate international standards. Relevant institutions and organizations have established good cooperation and partnerships in the last period, which forms a solid basis to intensify the pace of implementation of activities. The new NENDS applies to all grounds of discrimination and requires provision of more funds to carry out envisaged activities.

The Evaluation and the Working Group consultations were utilized to set the priority discrimination grounds, strategic goals, and activities for the period from 2016 to 2020.

Representatives of state institutions, civil society organizations and of international organizations, participants in the public debate held in Skopje, on 17 December 2015, as well as the additional comments given during or after the said public debate greatly contributed to drafting the National Equality and Non-Discrimination Strategy. Most of the presented proposals were integrated in the Strategy itself.

2. BACKGROUND

2.1. General Review of the State of Play

Following the adoption of the Law on the Prevention of and Protection against Discrimination in 2010 until presently, public awareness has been significantly raised about the importance of rights, their protection, and of the protection against discrimination.

By presenting analyses, pursuing campaigns, organizing debates and other similar activities, citizens' awareness has been raised in terms of recognizing discrimination, and they are better informed about their rights and about possibilities for their protection.

Despite the fact that according to the European Commission Report on the Progress of the Republic of Macedonia and the recommendations issued by UN human rights bodies such as CEDAW 2013, UPR 2014, CAT, CERD and CCPR 2015, there is still a need to fully harmonize the Law on the Prevention of and Protection against Discrimination with the European legislation and to promote certain rights, sexual orientation and gender identity are becoming more and more visible and better protected, owing to measures and activities pursued by state institutions, supported by international and civil society organizations, aimed at promoting the non-discrimination concept.

In March 2007, in following with the contemporary democratic civic concept, and in line with international standards, the Government of the Republic of Macedonia, by endorsing the Systematization of Jobs and the organizational set-up of the Ministry of Labour and Social Policy, established a Sector for Equal Opportunities at the Ministry. This Sector has already assumed the coordinating role in this area and it is continually upgrading its capacity and the quality of its work in the non-discrimination area.

The main task of the Ministry of Labour and Social Policy, i.e. of the Sector is to work on the promotion of equal opportunities and equality, and on the prevention of and protection against any form of discrimination.

The Sector for Equal Opportunities is also tasked with ensuring inter-sector and inter-ministerial cooperation, as well as cooperation with the civil society sector and with social partners, beings tasked as well with monitoring the implementation of the Law on Equal Opportunities of Women and Men, the Law on the Prevention of and Protection against Discrimination, and other laws and programs pertaining to this area, while coordinating the work and monitoring the implementation of policies, measures and activities.

2.2. Legal Framework

The non-discrimination and equally legal framework in the Republic of Macedonia is made up of the Constitution of the Republic of Macedonia, laws, and ratified international treaties.

The fundamental values of the constitutional order of the Republic of Macedonia are basic freedoms and rights of the individual and citizen, recognized in international law and set down in the Constitution.

The right to non-discrimination and equality is enshrined in Article 9 of the Constitution of the Republic of Macedonia, which contains provisions on fundamental human rights and freedoms: "Citizens of the Republic of Macedonia are equal in their freedoms and rights, regardless of sex, race, colour of skin, national and social origin, political and religious beliefs, property, and social status."

This constitutional provision has been transposed in a number of laws relevant in this area: the Law on Courts, the on Labour Relations, the Law on Equal Opportunities for Men and Women, the Law on the Family, the Law on Protection of Children, the Law on Primary Education, the Law on Secondary Education, the Law on Higher Education, the Law on Volunteering, the Law on Public Health, the Law on Associations and Foundations, the Law on Political Parties and other laws.

Thus, Articles 3 to 6 of the Law on Courts, inter alia, envisage that the goals and functions of the judiciary are to ensure equality, non-discrimination on any grounds, and legal security based on the rule of law. Everyone has the right to equal access courts to protect their rights and legally founded interests.

In the context of patients' rights, the Law on Protection of Patients' Rights prohibits discrimination on grounds of gender, race, colour of skin, language, religion, political or any other opinion, ethnic or social origin, belonging to an ethnic minority, material status, origin by birth, sexual orientation or any other status.

Furthermore, in the exercise of social protection rights, the Law on Social Protection prohibits direct and indirect discrimination on grounds of gender, race, colour of skin, national, ethnic, social, political, religious, cultural, linguistic and social affiliation, disability and origin.

The Law on the Protection of Children prohibits any form of direct or indirect discrimination and ill-treatment in the exercise of the rights of the child and in the application of any forms of child protection, as defined under the same Law.

The purpose of the Law on the Protection against Mobbing in the Workplace is to prevent and protect against psychological and sexual harassment on the job, i.e. workplace and to ensure a sound working environment.

The Law on Labour Relations incorporates provisions prohibiting discrimination (Article 6 of the Law), stipulating as well that provisions of collective agreements and employment contracts, which set forth and enable discrimination on any of the grounds referred to in Article 6 shall be null and void. This Law defines direct and indirect discrimination, as well as exceptions from the prohibition of discrimination, defining as well the terms of harassment and sexual harassment. In cases of discrimination on any of the grounds referred to in Article 6 of this Law, job applicants or employees have the right to compensation of damages in line with the Contract Law.

The purpose of the Law on Equal Opportunities for Men and Women is to ensure equal opportunities for women and men in areas of politics, economy, and social protection, education, culture, health care, civil society and in any other area of social life. The Law contains definitions of equal opportunities for men and women, of equal treatment, gender discrimination, direct gender discrimination, indirect gender discrimination, gender based harassment, gender-based sexual harassment, full equality of women and men, equal representation and gender mainstreaming.

The Framework Agreement and the 2001 Constitutional Amendments grant the Ombudsman important competences in protection against discrimination. Thus, according to Amendment 11 to the Constitution, the Ombudsman “shall give particular attention to safeguarding the principles of non-discrimination and equitable representation of communities in state administration bodies, bodies of units of local self-government and in public services.”

With a view to enabling the exercise of this constitutionally defined competence, a new Law on the Ombudsman's Office was adopted in 2003. According to Article 2 of this Law “The Ombudsman shall be a body of the Republic of Macedonia that shall protect the constitutional and legal rights of citizens and all other persons when these are infringed by acts, actions and omissions by the state administration bodies and by other bodies and organisations that have public authority, and who shall undertake actions and measures for protection of the principle of non-discrimination and adequate and equitable representation of community members in the state administration bodies, the local self-government units and the public institutions and agencies.”

The Law on the Prevention of and Protection against Discrimination, adopted in 2010, ensures prevention of and protection against discrimination in exercising rights guaranteed under the Constitution of the Republic of Macedonia, laws and ratified international treaties.

This Law prohibits any direct or indirect discrimination, invocation and stimulation of discrimination and helping in discriminatory treatment on the grounds of sex, race, skin colour, gender, belonging to marginalized group, ethnic origin, language, citizenship, social origin, religion or confession, other types of belief, education, political belonging, personal or social status, mental and physical disability, age, family or marital status, property status, health condition or on any other grounds established by law or by ratified international agreements.

This Law furthermore defines and prohibits serious forms of discrimination, such as multiple discrimination or discrimination against a person on several discriminatory grounds.

The Criminal Code guarantees criminal law protection against discrimination and inequality. Thus, the Criminal Code sanctions the following crimes: Violation of the equality of citizens; Endangering the security; Causing national, racial, or religious hate, discord, and intolerance.

The international legal framework is made up of the following instruments:

- Universal Declaration of Human Rights
- International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination (CERD) and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW)
- International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights

2.3. Institutional Framework

The institutional framework for the protection against discrimination at the national level consists of judicial and non-judicial protection bodies.

Assembly of the Republic of Macedonia

The Assembly of the Republic of Macedonia is a legislative body tasked with adopting and amending the Constitution (which on its part sets the basis for the equality and non-discrimination concepts), as well as with the adoption of laws proposed by the Government of the Republic of Macedonia. In addition, the Assembly elects members of independent state bodies (the Ombudsman and the Commission for Protection against Discrimination), judges of the Constitutional Court and members of the Judicial Council.

The Assembly of the Republic of Macedonia has established several working bodies, the following being of the greatest relevance in this respect: Standing Survey Committee for the protection of human rights and freedoms (having general competences for human rights issues); Committee for relations among communities (focused on assessment of the application of the double majority principle in adopting laws, then of equitable representation, dealing also with issues of discrimination on grounds of ethnic affiliation), Committee for equality of women and men (established to promote and monitor gender equality in all fields of social life) and Committee for Labour and Social Policy (which is the in-line Assembly committee for all draft laws in this area).

The President of the Republic of Macedonia: though not having duties directly linked with this specific area, in representing the Republic of Macedonia, the President of the country is to protect and promote values enshrined in the Constitution, including values such as equality and non-discrimination.

The Government of the Republic of Macedonia considers and endorses drafts of laws, national strategies, and action plans, prepared by in-line ministries, follows their implementation and institutes proceedings in cases of established human rights violations, including when state authorities have committed such violations.

The Secretariat for European Affairs monitors the process of harmonization of the national legislation with the European legislation, by transposing EU directives into national regulations.

Ministries with specific competences relating to equality/non-discrimination are the Ministry of Labour and Social Policy- MLSP, the Ministry of the Interior – MoI, the Ministry of Local Self-Government- MLSG, the Ministry of Justice -MoJ, the Ministry of Education and Science- MES, the Ministry of Health- MoH, and others.

The Secretariat for Implementation of the Framework Agreement (SIFA) has specific competences, especially as regards discrimination on grounds of ethnic affiliation. Furthermore, the Ministry of Education and Science and the Ministry of Culture, each have separate departments, having specific tasks relating to equality of communities in the respective areas of competence of these two Ministries.

The Ministry of Labour and Social Policy is the key importance ministry in relation to legislation in the area of non-discrimination and equal opportunities. The Ministry is actively involved in raising the awareness about gender issues and non-discrimination among central and local authorities. The Ministry of Labour and Social Policy fulfils this task through its Sector for Equal Opportunities. All Ministries have assigned officers - coordinators for equal opportunities for women and men, who are tasked with implementing activities in order to pursue the competence of the Ministry for ensuring equal opportunities.

The Judiciary

The Constitutional Court is the highest instance national judicial institution to which, according to Article 9 of the Constitution, all citizens may apply in cases in which their human rights have been violated, including in cases in which they have been subjected to discrimination.

Proceedings against this form of violation of rights may also be instituted before regular courts. Courts may also work on cases, which have been previously processed by any of the two independent state institutions.

Independent State Institutions

The two independent state institutions established in the Republic of Macedonia for the protection of citizens against violations of their constitutionally and legally guaranteed rights are:

The Commission for Protection against Discrimination

The main body for protection against discrimination is the Commission for Protection against Discrimination, established under Section IV of the Law on the Prevention of and Protection against Discrimination. Established as an independent legal entity, this Commission has competences to process applications against all natural and legal persons. It is seated in Skopje, but has the mandate to receive applications from across the country. This Commission is the first such body established to work exclusively on issues relating to discrimination, both in the public and in the private sector.

The Ombudsman's Office

The Ombudsman's Office was established prior to the establishment of the Commission for Protection against Discrimination and is therefore better known to the public, beings also more accessible locally, having six regional offices and a specialized department for non-discrimination and equitable representation. However, the Ombudsman's mandate is of a narrower character considering that it processes applications only in cases in which rights have been violated by state authorities and other bodies and organizations having a public mandate.

The Ombudsman does not have the competence to act in cases in which the alleged discriminator is a private entity. In such cases, the damaged person may lodge an application with the Commission for Protection against Discrimination.

In the context of protection against ethnic discrimination, in addition to the Ombudsman's Office and the Commission for Protection against Discrimination, another important institution is the Agency for Realization of Rights of Communities, established in accordance with the relevant law. The Agency is tasked with implementation of fundamental principles, deriving from the Ohrid Framework Agreement (and the Constitution) relating to protection of rights of persons belonging to small ethnic communities representing less than 20% of the total population. The Agency is especially focused on the consistent implementation of the principle of equitable representation.

Local Self-Government

The main bodies working on issues of equality and non-discrimination in units of local self-government are the Committees for relations among communities (which are obligatorily established in municipalities of mixed ethnic composition) and Committees for equality between women and men (which all municipalities are to establish). These are advisory bodies to Municipal Councils and work on issues within their competences, while Councils are to take into consideration their recommendations.

Social Partners

The main social partners are associations of workers and associations of employers, as well as the academia and the wider civil society sector, including religious communities. The media are also of key importance.

The associations of workers and of employers, respectively are one of the most important partners in protecting rights of workers, especially against discriminatory practices.

Other relevant stakeholders are civil society organizations which are active in areas of legislation, i.e. support to drafting laws by offering comparative analysis, reviews of the current situation, defining proposals; strengthening the awareness- promotion of the equality concept, campaigns for fight against discrimination; institutional development- capacity building, participation in working groups established within state institutions; and monitoring the situation with equality / discrimination – identification of cases, public opinion surveys about citizens' perceptions.

The International Community

Institutions and organizations, which are part of the international community, such as UN agencies, the EU Delegation, the OSCE, diplomatic missions and consular posts, international non-governmental organizations and consulting firms have their respective roles in this field (with a different degree of involvement or responsibility), as follows: promotion of international human rights and non-discrimination standards; support to and monitoring the process of transposing such standards in the national legislation; monitoring and reporting on the application of standards; support to institutions to cope with new competences in this area (technical assistance, trainings and other capacity building activities); and support for projects (mainly of local civil society organizations) for awareness raising.
